

Young Workers Organise Against the Fast Food Giants

Meeting with Unite & Supersize
My pay activist
from New Zealand

Mike Treen

Monday
Feb 11

At Community Base, North Road Brighton
Brighton, 7.00-8.30pm

The meeting is in the Conference Room on the top floor in the South Wing.

More details – 07904 431 959 / www.nosweat.org.uk / mick@nosweat.org.uk Part of a national tour & week of action organised by No Sweat

The Supersize My Pay Campaign

in New Zealand set out to organise young workers in the casualised, low pay, fast food sector. It took on the likes of KFC and Pizza Hut and in the process organised the first successful strike in a Starbucks outlet.

Come and hear the story of how they did it, and get inspired to do the same here.

As well as Mike Treen from the Unite (NZ) Supersize My Pay Campaign, at some meetings, we will have an activist and fast food worker from the French campaign Stop Precarite.

No Sweat

Is an activist-based solidarity campaign against sweatshop labour. We campaign in support of low paid, exploited workers in the garment and other industries around the world and at home.

Starbucks

Is a target that No Sweat has been working to unionise with the Industrial Workers of the World. Through a combination of talking to workers to explain their rights and give them confidence to stand up; plus routine union campaigning and representation and direct action, we aim to show the coffee and fast food sectors that workers are not disposable.

For information on how you can help, please get in touch.

No Sweat, PO Box 36707, London SW9 8YA. 07904 431 959. www.nosweat.org.uk admin@nosweat.org.uk